Authors can send email submissions in the format of books and book proposals with a short CV outlining their publications. Editors select publishing proposals, and, if they are accepted, then the full texts are sent to reviewers. The final publishing decision takes no more than two months. Authors cannot submit books or book proposals under consideration of another publisher.

Editors select publishing proposals written in Italian presenting a new and innovative contribution to the aims and scope of the series. Editors may also consider books and book proposals written in English.
